The Official Title of 2021 Summer Olympics

Though the event is happening in 2021, it will still be referred to as Tokyo 2020 Olympics. Considering contractual agreements between the stakeholders and the existing marketing and branding, the organizers choose to stick with the precious title for Tokyo 2020.

It, therefore, means that the official branding of the Olympics taking place in 2021 in Tokyo is “Tokyo 2020”. The medals will also be for “Tokyo 2020” and not ‘Tokyo 2021’.

Which Countries will Participate in the Tokyo 2020?

All countries will take part in the 2021 Summer Olympics except North Korea. North Korea’s Olympic Committee confirmed that its athletes would not attend the Olympics, citing the Covid-19 pandemic.

The Field and Track Events Venue

All track events except the 50K Race Walk and marathon will happen in Tokyo’s National Stadium. The average temperatures will be almost similar to those in Doha during the 2019 IAAF World Championship. But high temperatures are not ideal for long events such as the marathon, causing a debate on where the 2021 Olympic marathon will occur.

The organizing committee suggested various ways the athletes could keep cool, like planting trees within the course for shade or putting water misting stations. But these ideas were overtaken by Sapporo’s looped course, which is approximately a five-hour drive on Tokyo’s north. The temperatures are much more relaxed there, making it the ideal place to hold the Olympic marathon.

Which Games and Events Will Take Place at The Tokyo 2020 Olympics

The Tokyo 2020 summer Olympics will feature all the existing games and fifteen new events. Additionally, five more sports have been introduced:

1. Baseball/softball
2. Karate
3. Sport climbing
4. Surfing
5. Skateboarding

With these sports, the total number of sports at the Tokyo 2020 Olympics will be 33.

Is It a Must for the Tokyo 2020 Participants to be vaccinated against Covid-19?

It's not a must for participants to be vaccinated. However, all the participants are encouraged to go for the Coronavirus vaccine as a safety precaution against the disease. The IPC and IOC made some Covid-19 guidelines to follow during the event.

According to the guidelines, the athletes shouldn't leave the Olympic Village during the competition. Participants will get tested for Covid-19, and if found positive, they will have to self-isolate as per the WHO guidelines. They also should not visit any public sites not approved by the organizing committee.

Can I attend the Tokyo 2020 summer Olympics as a spectator?

No, you can't attend the event as an international spectator. However, local spectators will be allowed into the event venues. The local spectators, officials, and participants must follow all the Covid-19 guidelines provided by the organizing committee and the World Health Organization.
